THE INTRODUCTION.

SHORT-HAND is an art whereby words are diſtinctly expreſſed in the moſt conciſe and expeditious manner poſſible: and the many advantages ariſing from the practice of it ſufficiently teſtify its utility. By this expeditious way of writing, a perſon may minute down many things, which time and opportunity would not permit him to do in the common hand, and conſequently may accumulate many things of the greateſt importance, which otherwiſe would be entirely loſt. It is of great uſe to thoſe who write in public what they would keep ſecret, and to thoſe who write much for themſelves, eſpecially ſtudents, whoſe thoughts frequently flow quicker than they can commit them to paper in the common way. Such perſons generally write haſtily, by which means a good hand is ſpoiled, which the uſe of Short Hand will probably prevent. However, every one muſt allow, that it is very comprehenſive, and of ſo much ſervice, as the time it ſaves him; and although the ready writer only can copy verbatim from an orator, yet every one, by a little practice, may ſoon become a proficient, and reap the full benefit of this art.

After having examined all the beſt Short Hands that had been publiſhed, I imagined that ſome improvements might be made; and with this view I lately amuſed myſelf with forming this Hand, which I preſume, is more conciſe and intelligible than any other extant.

Among all the Authors I have ſeen, none have laid down any rules for compoſing a Short Hand; and as the plan on which this Hand is formed, is preſumed to be the only conſiſtent one, by which a Short Hand can be rendered intelligible, I apprehend it will not be unacceptable to any lover of that ſcience.

In the firſt place I imagine, that any two conſonants, which never meet in the ſame word, without a vowel between them, may be ſignified by two ſtraight ſtrokes, though drawn in the ſame poſition, if they differ only in length; provided different vowels are ſignified by different places; or if thoſe vowels that are not ſignified by particular places, are ſo made as to join at either end, with every conſonant.

Therefore, in order to know if there were any ſuch conſonants as ſeldom or never meet, I collected from Mr. Samuel Johnſon's Engliſh Double Letters deſcribed.

The turn which diſtinguiſhes the l in double or treble letters, is the ſame way as the character for l. See dl, ld, fl, lf: r alſo is underſtood in the ſame manner. See rd, dr, rf, fr, &c. Ch is longer than qu; ct is not ſo fine as k; lm and l differ in ſize, ſo do rm and r; rn is deeper than r; ob is ſtruck upward; ok is o and k joined, and xk is x and k joined; thr is a daſh of the pen downright, is full at top, and ends in a hair ſtroke.

ORTHOGRAPHY

Is but little regarded in Short Hand, it being cuſtomary to write only ſuch characters for a word as are abſolutely neceſſary, to bring its idea to the mind.

K muſt be wrote for c where c ſounds like k, and where c ſounds like s, write s; alſo for z write s, except at the beginning of a word.

VOWELS

Are either written or ſignified by places.

A

Is expreſſed at the beginning of a word by a tittle placed above the middle of the following letter, as in am. See plate 3.

A in the middle of a word, is underſtood by ſetting the middle of the letter following the a higher than the middle of the letter preceding it. See a man, a hart.

A or ay at the end of a word, is diſtinguiſhed by a dot above the middle of the preceding character, as in may, pray, asarabacca.

Being

E

Being the firſt letter of a word, is ſignified by a tittle, ſet even with the middle of the following letter, as in egg, even, ever.

In the middle of a word e is underſtood when the middle of the character following it ſtands even with the character preceding it, as in deter.

E is ſeldom made at the end of any word, except thoſe that would be confuſed without it; it is expreſſed by a dot placed even with the middle of the preceding letter. See we, ye, free; a dot in this place is ſometimes made for ey. See prey.

I and Y.

The place of i or y is as much below the middle, as the place of a is above it. See idly, nigh, critick.

O

Is written three ways: at the the beginning of a word, as in odly, in the middle, and at the end of a word, as cog, dog, dot, to, go, no, who; this o is made, and joins letters like s, only the turn of the pen muſt be ſo ſhort, or cloſe, as to make it appear like a ſmall tittle; but where this tittle cannot be made in the middle of a word, the ſtraight alphabetical o muſt, as in probe, prove, rover.

U

At the beginning of a word, is ſignified by a tittle, cloſe over the top of the following character, as in ugly, up; but the tittle muſt be put under b and v. See ubiquiſt, uvula.

U in the middle of a word, is written, as in uvual and buff: likewiſe, if the pen be taken off, to join one one character to another, and that taking off of the pen be made viſible by a particular joining, u by ſuch joining is underſtood to come between them, as in drug.

Two Vowels

At the beginning of a word are written, as ail, aunt, eaſt, out; in the middle of a word they are expreſſed by making one of them, if an o or u, and the other is ſignified by the place of the following character, as in chaos, laud, leod, feud, lion, diurnal, load, poet, foil, attenuate, duel, ruin; but if neither of the vowels be an o or u, make a tittle for the firſt, and put the following conſonant in the place of the ſecond, as in jael, maid, wean, ſteep, height, phial, diet.

Study and Philoſophy are written to ſhew how words may be wrote more lineal.

The PRAXIS

Needs but little explanation, for example: Suppoſe you would know how the word philter is wrote in Short Hand, the number againſt it is 1145; look among the plates for 1140 in the firſt column, and for 5 at the top, then in the common right angle of meeting is the word, wrote in Short Hand filtr.

Parts of Words,

Otherwiſe called Prepoſitions and Terminations, deſcribed with their uſe.

Able, ible; ables, ibles always join at the end of a word, and are ſtruck upward; ables, ibles differ from able, ible only in length. See 604, 1110, 505, 1549, 619, 1112, &c. theſe characters are never made after b or v.

An, and, this character differs from thr only in poſition; when it ſtands cloſe to a word it is dn. See 73, 74, 75, 76, &c. but if it ſtands alone, or is joined at the end of a word, it is and, as in 122, 883.

Cal is underſtood by kl. See 1201.

Cate is kt. See 402, 617.

Circum is a ſpiral. See 230, 232.

Com leans to the right. See 258, 278, 282.

Con is upright and longer than n. See 325, 330.

Counter is deeper than l, and not ſo wide as lm. See 359, 360.

Ed, this termination is ſometimes ſignified by a tittle, under the character preceding it, as in 1378; but if the preceding letter be either b or v, make the d as in 126.

Em, im, ſion, cian, tion, being a larger tittle than the other, is made by a turn of the pen. See 531, 768, 771, 784, 263, 331, 920; this character ſtands alone for ſo.

En, in, at the beginning of a word, are ſignified by the ſtraight o, as in 536, 826.

Ing, ings, inging, the ſtraight o is made at the end of a word for ing. See 542, ings and inging are ſignified as in 875, 1446, 172, 1445.

Eu, ew, ſounding like u, are wrote u, as in 578, 1033, 741, 1034, 1426.

For, fore, ference, differ from thr or and in poſition only; this character is never joined for for, or fore, but it muſt for ference. See 654, 653, 294, 814.

Full leans to the right. See 1372, 1693.

Here is hr. See 731, 732.

Ify is ſignified by croſſing ſome character in a word with a ſhort lineal ſtroke, as in 507, 1231.

Nify is underſtood when the character before it is croſſed with an n. See 441, 805, 1441.

Inter is nt, the n is made backward. See 845, 847.

Ity, ities are ſtruck upward; they join at the end of a word, a word, and differ only in length. See 196, 1165, 791, but are not made after b or v.

Ject, j being wrote only at the beginning of a few words for j, in other places it is wrote for ject, as in 3, 822, 843.

Leſs or little, may be ſymbollically expreſſed by a very ſmall l. See 716, 543.

Ly, ſome words may be underſtood to end with ly, though the tittle for the y be omitted, as in 714, 1453; but after ing and full, ly is ſignified by a tittle only. See 926, 1393; alſo after tive, tial, and tious, cious, a tittle is made for ly.

Man is ſtruck backward. See 938, 940.

Ment, ments differ in length. See 313, 793.

Ous ſounding us, the o is left out. See 97, 616.

Out, over, under; this character is oval, and leans to the right; it is ſet even with the line for out, above the line for over, and under the line for under. See 1106, 1096, 1660.

Ow ſounding like o, is expreſſed by o. See 651, 750.

Cence, ſence, cenſe, ſenſe are written sns, as 134, 568, 798, 1039.

Ces, ſes differ from out, &c. in poſition. See 696, 1107, 1147.

Shall, tial and cial are ſignified by the ſame character as they ſound alike. See 946, 104, 1113, ſhalt is longer.

Ship is ſignified by croſſing a word with a down ſtroke from the left to the right. See 630, 715.

Ceive, ſive is sv. See 285, 588, 1506.

Super is caſt upward. See 1518, 1520.

There, their is thr. See 1559, 1561.

Tious, cious, ſounding like ſhus, are ſignified by z, as in 1631, 65, 1178, 403.

Tive is tv. See 59, 799, or t ſtruck upward, as in 1502, 1525, 605, 110.

Trans, the t is ſtruck upward. See 1593, 1596.

Un at the beginning of a word is ſignified by the alphabetical u. See 1647, 1672.

What is wht, the t is ſtruck upward. See 1715.

Whero is whr. See 1723, were is wr.

B and p being the neareſt alike of any two characters, are therefore the likelieſt to be taken one for the other, where they are not joined, (for where they are, there can be no miſtake, as the one joins at top and the other at bottom) but if any ſuch miſtake ſhould happen, it would ſoon be perceived by the ſenſe. Moſt authors make uſe of characters which differ only as one is ſtruck up and the other down, and they think that diſtinction ſufficient; however, if there be a reſemblance in the characters for b and p, there is alſo ſome reſemblance in their ſound, and in ſeveral languages they are uſed promiſcuouſly; but if any one thinks a greater diſtinction neceſſary, b may be made compound, when it does not join to any other character. See plate 1. it is properly bp.

F and v are pronounced nearly alike; therefore the diſtinction between them is ſufficient.

D has ſomething of the ſound of t.

It is not at all neceſſary to make any diſtinction between g and j, as their ſound is nearly the ſame, therefore I uſe j for ject.

Commandment is a comma.

The following double consonants begin no word, therefore, when they are at the beginning, e is understood to come between them, i. e.

When the Short Hand letters ſtand alone, they ſignify ſuch words as are on the ſame line with them in plate 1, i. e. the Short Hand a ſtands alone for any, e for every, g for God, j for Jeſus, o for on, but above the line for upon. See 1725, 1874. m for much, this character made larger ſtands for moſt. See 1842. d is placed below the line for down, and p above for up. See 1793.

A tittle is ſometimes put in the place of i, for the pronoun I, otherwiſe the alphabetical i muſt be made.

The diſtance between words ſhould be double at leaſt to that between the disjoined characters of any word, unleſs words are joined together as thus: A great book is a great evil. Plate 4.

Points, or ſtops, are either ſignified by the diſtance of one word from another, or by characters (See plate 2) though they are generally diſregarded.

If a conſonant be wrote in the place of a, a will then be underſtood to come before it; thus l in the place of a is all. See 1950; m am 1951; r are 1953; s as, 1955; t at, 1956.

E is underſtood as in 1958, 1959.

I and y are underſtood as in 1974, 1960, 1961, and u as in 1963; o may ſometimes join words together thus: Whatogling, whenoccaſion.

The

The tittles for vowels cannot be left out in ſome caſes, and ſhould not in others, where it would make the reading difficult, or the writing irregular, ſo that it will oftner anſwer to omit the tittle for a than it will for e or i.
